The Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat is a vital interface between global policies in the economic, social and environmental spheres and national action. The Department works in three main interlinked areas: (i) it compiles, generates and analyses a wide range of economic, social and environmental data and information on which States Members of the United Nations draw to review common problems and to take stock of policy options; (ii) it facilitates the negotiations of Member States in many intergovernmental bodies on joint courses of action to address ongoing or emerging global challenges; and (iii) it advises interested Governments on the ways and means of translating policy frameworks developed in United Nations conferences and summits into programmes at the country level and, through technical assistance, helps build national capacities.

NOTE

The designations employed and the presentation of the material in this publication do not imply the expression of any opinion whatsoever on the part of the Secretariat of the United Nations concerning the legal status of any country or territory or of its authorities, or concerning the delimitation of its frontiers or boundaries.

Where the designation "country or area" appears in the headings of tables, it covers countries, territories or areas.

INTRODUCTION

This issue of the Population and Vital Statistics Report presents data for countries or areas[1] on population size (total, male, and female) from the latest available census, estimated total population size for 2003 or 2004 (the later available year), and the number and rate of vital events (live births, deaths, and infant deaths) for the latest available year since 1980. These data are presented as reported by national statistical authorities to the Demographic Yearbook of the Statistics Division of the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs.[2] This issue also presents data for the world and its major areas and regions[1] on estimated population size (total) for both 2003 and 2004. These estimates were prepared by the Population Division of the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs.[3] The data described in this paragraph are presented in three tables:

Table 1. Estimated mid-year population by major area and region, 2003 and 2004
Table 2. Population, latest available census and estimates for 2003 or 2004
Table 3. Live births, deaths, and infant deaths, latest available year since 1980

TECHNICAL NOTES

A. Population

Population estimates for 2003 and 2004 for the world and it major areas and regions (table 1) refer to 1 July of the given year, and are produced by the United Nations Population Division.[3]

Latest population census figures for countries or areas (table 2) refer to the given date, and are presented as reported by national statistical authorities to the Demographic Yearbook of the United Nations Statistics Division.[2] The data presented are from nationwide censuses conducted on either a de jure or de facto basis,[4] as indicated in the column "Code," and using different methods of enumeration: conventional/traditional, based on administrative/population registers, or a combination of methods that may include a sample survey. Population census data are presented for 233 countries or areas that conducted a census in the period 1960-2004.

Population estimates for 2003 or 2004 for countries or areas (table 2) refer to 1 July of the given year unless otherwise noted, and are presented as reported by national statistical authorities to the Demographic Yearbook of the United Nations Statistics Division.[2] They are also coded as either de jure or de facto, since for some countries or areas the code is not the same as for the census figure. Population estimates are presented for 133 countries or areas.

B. Vital statistics

Table 3 presents data for countries or areas on live births, deaths, and infant deaths (excluding foetal deaths) for the latest available year since 1980. The data usually refer to vital events that occurred in the specified year, even if some were registered later. In some countries or areas, however, they refer to events that were registered in the specified year, and therefore include some events that occurred previously, and exclude some events that occurred in the specified year but that were or will be registered later. In this case, the symbol "+" is displayed in the column "Code."

Most of the vital statistics data presented in table 3 come from national civil registration systems. These systems differ markedly in the completeness of the data that they produce. If the country or area reports to the [1] "Countries or areas" are grouped geographically into 21 "regions" (for example, Central America), which are then grouped into six "major areas" (for example, Latin America and the Caribbean), in table 1 of this Report. They are listed by six "continents" (for example, North America) in tables 2 and 3.

[2] Data on these and many other demographic variables are maintained and continuously updated in the Demographic Yearbook database. A small selection is published twice annually as the Population and Vital Statistics Report, and a much larger selection is published annually as the Demographic Yearbook, which also has complementary statistics and extensive technical notes. The Demographic Yearbook is also available online, at: http://unstats.un.org/unsd/demographic/products/dyb/default.htm.

[4] A de facto population should include all persons physically present in the country or area at the reference date, whether or not they are usual residents. The de jure population should include all usual residents, whether or not they are physically present.

Demographic Yearbook its own estimate of the completeness of its civil registration data, then this estimate is classified in the column "Code" as follows: "C" indicates virtually complete data (that is, representing 90 per cent or more of the events occurring in the specified year); and "U" indicates incomplete data (that is, less than 90 per cent of the events). Data not derived from civil registration—usually official estimates from sample surveys or demographic analyses—are assumed reliable and are indicated by "|".

The table shows both the number of vital events and the rates at which they occur. Crude birth and death rates are the number of live births and (total) deaths, respectively, per thousand persons in the same year. These rates are based on estimates of mid-year population as reported by national statistical authorities to the Demographic Yearbook. The infant mortality rate is the number of deaths of persons less than one year of age per thousand live births in the same year. Unless otherwise noted, the rates shown were computed by the United Nations Statistics Division. Rates were only computed when the numerator—the number of vital events—is at least 30 and when the denominator (mid-year population or the number of live births) is available for the same year. Furthermore, rates were computed only if the code for vital events (see the previous paragraph) is "C" or "|".

C. Symbols

The following symbols and notations are used.

...	Data or information not available/rates not computed
-	Magnitude zero
*	Provisional figure
+	Data tabulated by year of registration rather than occurrence
C	Civil registration, estimated 90 per cent or more complete
U	Civil registration, estimated less than 90 per cent complete
|	Source other than civil registration, estimated reliable
DF	Population de facto
DJ	Population de jure
SSDF	Sample survey, population de facto

D. Highlights

1. Population censuses

One goal of this report is to present the most recent data for total, male, and female population collected by a national population census. In the majority of cases, national population censuses are carried out once every ten years, that is, every census round. A census round, as defined and implemented by the United Nations, encompasses ten years starting with the fifth year of a decade and ending in the fourth year of the next decade (for example, the 2000 census round started on 1 January 1995 and ended on 31 December 2004). Detailed information on planned or conducted national population censuses is collected by the United Nations Statistics Division and presented at http://unstats.un.org/unsd/demographic/census/cendate/index.htm.

The latest available census figure for total population (for 1960-2004) is given in this publication for 233 countries or areas, usually (whenever available) disaggregated by sex. Of these figures, 176 (or 76 per cent) refer to the most recent completed—the 2000—round of censuses (1995-2004), 37 (or 16 per cent) refer to the 1990 census round (1985-1994), and 19 (or 8 per cent) refer to the 1980 or previous census rounds. Of the 57 countries or areas without a figure here for the most recent completed round, 27 actually conducted a recent census (see the above website), but those census data are not yet in the Demographic Yearbook for one of the following reasons: the country or area did not yet finish processing the data, did not yet release the data, or did not yet release the data to the United Nations; or the United Nations received the data too recently for inclusion in this publication. Taken together, 203 countries or areas (or 87.1 per cent of all) conducted a 2000-round census, of which 86.7 per cent are presented in this publication.

2. Vital statistics

The main source of vital statistics is civil registration. "Civil registration is the continuous, permanent, compulsory and universal recording of the occurrence and characteristics of events, including vital events, pertaining to the population, as provided by decree or regulation, in accordance with the legal requirements of a country."[5] The availability of detailed vital statistics for a country or area illustrates national capacity in the compilation of these statistics from civil registration systems. This report aims to present the most recent data on live births, deaths, and infant deaths reported to the Demographic Yearbook.

Out of 233 countries or areas, the latest available figure for live births refers to years 2002, 2003, or 2004 for 123 countries or areas (or 53 per cent); to years 2000 or 2001 for 33 countries or areas (or 14 per cent); and to earlier years (1980-1999) for 45 countries or areas (or 19 per cent). It must be emphasized that data on live births for these 25 years (1980-2004) are not available for 32 countries or areas (or 14 per cent). The situation for data on (total) deaths is similar. However, an even greater number of countries or areas do not report data on infant deaths: 47 (or 20 per cent). (There are 204 countries or areas in Table 3. This is 29 fewer than in Table 2, due to non-availability of vital statistics.)

When vital statistics are available for a country or area, their source is not necessarily a civil registration system. It may be a periodic survey, national projection, or census. These sources are considered reliable despite lacking the continuity, simultaneity, and universality of a civil registration system. On the other hand, if the source of vital statistics is a civil registration system, it is not always complete. If less than 90 per cent of all vital events are registered by the civil registration system, the data are assessed as incomplete. This assessment is based on information provided by national statistical authorities to the Demographic Yearbook. The graph below, which includes 233 countries or areas, presents the number of countries or areas by the source of vital statistics and, in the case of civil registration, by the estimated completeness of those statistics.
